CHOOSING JOINTS

SPRING

A spring joint is achieved by planing a curved cut into the middle edge of both boards so that when the boards are glued and clamped together the outside edges are brought tightly together.

TONG AND GROOVE

In “tongue and groove” style flooring joints, one edge has a rectangular piece sticking out in the center and the other edge has a rectangular piece cut into it.

CHOOSING SURFACE

BELEVED

A beveled edge floor is one in which an angle is formed between the edges of the 4 sides of the planks reducing the edges to a sloping end.

SANDED

A smooth sanded floor is one in which the planks are made perfectly smooth with a flat floor surface and an even thickness.
